

Richard Rose (1917-2005) was so disheartened with the phony spiritual teachers he encountered in his years of searching that he pledged to help seekers if he ever found an ultimate perspective. That pledge led him to develop the Albigen System. Commonsensible and practical, these principles and practices have helped thousands.

Join us for the eighth annual TAT Spring Conference. The weekend intensive offers an in-depth look at the principles and practices of Richard Rose's system. You will have the opportunity to meet, hear, and speak with students of Richard Rose and others who found answers in whole or in part through his methods.

Through a mix of talks, discussions, and exercises, you can experience a spirit of friendship that will bring inspiration and renewed determination to find answers to your deepest questions. And much like Richard Rose's approach, the teachings impose no oaths, dogmas, rituals, or onerous fees on the participants, asking only for your sincerity and fellowship.
